

FIVE WAYS OF TEACHING CHILDREN ABOUT THE ENVIRONMENT

1

Doing nature activities

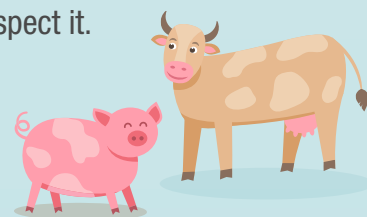

Being in close contact with the environment will make schoolchildren more aware of how important it is to protect it.

2

Visiting farms and garden centers

Spending time surrounded by plants and animals is a great way to make children feel at one with nature and learn to care for it and respect it.

3

Collecting waste

Investing a few hours in clearing waste from woodland areas and riversides will help children to realise how harmful it is for the environment.

4

Separating waste in the classroom

Having different-coloured waste bins in the classroom is extremely useful for teaching children how to recycle.

5

Talking about environmental problems

Holding debates to discuss simple ecological matters is an interactive way of inviting school children to think about the causes and come up with potential solutions.
