

PERSEO CHALLENGE REGULATIONS

1. Background to the Challenge

Iberdrola has over 1.1 million kilometres of electricity transmission and distribution lines spread throughout the United States, Brazil, the UK and Spain.

These power lines extend over different geographical areas and interact directly with the birds in the different ecosystems. In order to minimise the impact of its power lines, so-called anti-collision devices are installed, which make the overhead cables visible and prevent the birds from colliding with and/or being electrocuted by the lines.

The increasingly stringent requirements for the protection of birds mean that the number of operations to be carried out to install anti-collision devices is expected to increase. The installation of these devices must be safe, effective and allow continuity of service, as far as possible.

2. Description of the Challenge

In this context, Iberdrola - through its PERSEO International Start-up Programme - is looking for innovative solutions to facilitate placing these anti-collision elements on its overhead distribution lines.

The anti-collision elements may be placed on both ground and conductor cables, for the different configurations of lines from 13 kV to 132 kV. The lines may be in service at the time of installation, so the equipment must be prepared to withstand the various constraints this imposes.

Participants should develop the necessary equipment for installing the anti-collision elements on the conductor cross-sections defined in table 1 of NI 29.00.02. In addition, proposals for installing anti-collision elements not defined in the above-mentioned NI will also be accepted, although preference will be given to proposals that rely on already standardised anti-collision elements.

The challenge is launched within the framework of the new smart grids innovation hub, the Global Smart Grids Innovation Hub and Eureka. Iberdrola will make the Hub a worldwide smart grid benchmark through open collaboration and co-working between i-DE technicians, suppliers, start-ups and different organisations from all around the world.

Eureka is the world's largest public network for international cooperation in R&D and innovation and is present in more than 45 countries. The collaboration between Iberdrola and Eureka involves the activities specifically aimed at building and strengthening partnerships between corporations and start-ups from different sectors.

The proposals received will be analysed by experts from Iberdrola's Networks Business and, among others, the following value propositions will be considered:

- The maturity, reliability and scalability of the solution.

- Simplicity of installation and safety
- Continuity of the supply service
- Operation investment cost
- Applicability of the solution for this and other overhead distribution line operations
